Provisional Tax

Ratio Option – Provisional Tax and Ratio percentage calculation (please advise if you want to apply for the ratio option)

If your terminal tax is between $5,000 and $150,000 you can apply to use the ratio option for calculating your provisional tax. Application needs to be received by Inland Revenue prior to the start of the financial year you want it to apply to and should include total asset sales. In most cases this will be 31st March 2021 for it to apply to the 2022 financial year.

Once the application is accepted, Inland Revenue will issue a letter confirming the percentage to use for calculating your provisional tax. This percentage will also be preprinted on your GST return form or your MYIR online return. Provisional tax can then be calculated every two months and paid along with your GST (which will save making additional payments specifically for Provisional Tax).

The GST return clearly shows how to calculate the Provisional Tax under the Ratio Option in a step by step process. The Provisional Tax is calculated using the GST taxable supplies, which helps with income flows as opposed to the other options, which are based on the previous years income.
